HE WONT MARRY HER

A Young Man Named Sprinkle

WHO IS UNDER ARREST FOR BETRAYAL

Declares That The Girl Is Trying To Blackmail Him, And He Refuses To Marry Her

Says Jealousy Is the Real Motive.

Fred Sprinkle, the freight clerk on board the steamer Emma, accused of breach of promise by seventeen-year-old Rose Gilligan, believes that he is being systematically persecuted and will fight his case to the end.

He says that this is not the first time the girl has sought to coerce him into a marriage, and he is more than ever determined to avoid any such climax to their acquaintance. This is the second time Miss Gilligan has caused his arrest and Sprinkle intends it to be the last. She had him arrested in San Francisco last week, and he declares that she then saw the case was a hopeless one for her and gave up the idea of prosecuting. Then she suddenly swooped down upon him in this county, and has redoubled her efforts to bring him to terms.

Sprinkle lives close to the girl's home in this city, near the estuary, and has known her, he says, for years. He took her part on many occasions and fought her fights with parents and regulation enemies. Things went on this way until, as young Sprinkle says, he saw fit to go in other company, when Miss Gilligan asserted herself and refused to give him up. He thinks jealously is alone responsible for the present situation.

Sprinkle's employers have gone his bail, and the case has been set for July 28th. The case came up to be set to-day, and it was announced that San Francisco attorneys would make his fight. The accused man protests his innocence and is greatly worried over the charge of having wronged the girl.

May Not go East.

Reports have been current for the past three or four days that Professor Bernard Moses, head of the department of history at the State University, would probably soon give up his position at Berkeley to accept a similar one at the University of Chicago. Interviews with several of his most intimate friends at the University yesterday failed to estsblish any foundation for the rumor, further than that he had been asked to accept a position at Chicago. He is now giving a course of lectures in his specialty there, together with twenty or thirty other professors from various universities in America and Europe. He will return to Berkeley in time to take up his regular work in August, from all that can be learned.

Special Meeting.

Beacon Fire Company No. 1 of the West Berkeley Fire Department will hold a special meeting on Wednesday evening next for the purpose of electing delegates to the convention which will nominate a chief of the fire department. All members are requested to be present. WILLIAM DAVIS. President.

Jockey Club Lease

A lease was recorded Saturday from J. S. Emery to the California Jockey Club of a tract of land beginning on Hollis street, 325 feet north of Park avenue, thence easterly and parallel with Park avenue 769 feet; thence northerly to the land embraced within the present trotting park; then west 770 feet to the eastern line of Hollis street to the place of beginning. The lease is for fifteen years at $500 a year cash in advance. This will allow another approach to the race track.

Amusements.

"Nobody's Claim," with J. J. Dowling and Myra Davis in the leading roles, will be given at the Oakland Theater this week. Manager Bacon's clever company of players will assist. "Nobody's Claim" is brim full of sensation, pathos and comedy and abounds in heroism, fortitude and devotion. In this production the stage mechanism occupies no small part in the perfection of the entertainment. There will be the scene of the train "hold up," the den of the outlaws and still another thrilling feature. It is that of the attempt to cremate the hero in a hut in which he has been confined, his rescue by a woman and the terrible death by fire of the villian who falls a victim of his own trap.

After Thirty Years.

"I'll tell you a queer story," said Chief Dickinson, of the Cleveland Fire Department "and it is a true story at that. In 1864, toward the end of the war, I was at Fort Lincoln at Washington. Newspapers were scarce, and when we managed to get hold of one we regarded it as a treasure.

"One day I was fortunate enough to get hold of a copy of the Philadelphia Inquirer, which contained a lot of war news. After I had read it I handed it around among the boys, and finally loaned it to a man named Breymeier.

"Yesterday who should walk into my office but Breymeier, who returned the paper with thanks. He was looking over his old papers to get information to assist the widow of an old comrade in getting a pension, and he ran across the Inquirer with my name written at the top. What do you think of the conscience of a man who would return a paper after all that time?"

The particular copy of the Inquirer in point is a great contrast to the paper of the present day. It is a five column, eight-page affair.

One of the articles is headed with the caption: "Destruction of the Alabama. A naval combat off Cherbourg France Gallant battle between the United States Steamer Kearsarge and the Alabama." The fight was on June 19, and the Inquirer was of the date of July 6.

Members of the Board of Supervisors are finding considerable fault because District Attorney Snook is imitating Grover Cleveland by going off fishing just at the time he is needed badly by the Board during their sittings as a Board of Equalization. The Judges are now enjoying their vacations and that is the only time that the District Attorney can best get away.

Arthur Sewall, the Democratic candidate for vice-president, is being raked over the coals for employing the most brutal captains and mates that sail the seas. All applications for redress from his brutal employees has been of no avail as he always takes their parts, and if the law grappels with them, he employes the very best attorneys to defend them. From the records that are being published, it is very doubtful whether Mr. Sewall will get many of the sailors' votes

DOCTOR JEFFRIE'S

The President of the Christian College

WHICH IS TO BE ESTABLISHED IN BERKELEY

Has Arrived And Is Making Preparations For The Opening Next Month

Dr. Jefferson Arrives.

Dr. S. M. Jefferson, who is to take charge of the Berkeley Bible Seminary to be established by the Disciples or Christians of California in affiliated relation with the State University, has rived in Berkeley, and is preparing to complete the preparations necessary for the beginning of the work. He is stopping for the present with his wife and three children at the home of Mrs. Parkhurst on the corner of Channing way and Dana street.

The seminary will open in August simultaneously with the opening of the State University. It will be in every sense a strictly theological school when perfected, and will be patterned largely after the seminary at Bethany College from which Dr. Jefferson comes.

"The details respecting the courses of study to be offered," said Dr. Jefferson to-day, "will be made public within a short time. In the meanwhile it might be said in general that a critical and complete theological course, such is usually offered in theological seminaries. A more popular course will also be offered.

"For the present only temporary quarters for the convenience of students will be secured, awaiting a more complete developement of our plans.

"The prospect of the work here is most flattering. About $100,000 endowment has already been secured and it is hoped that at no distant day we will be able to erect a theological hall near the university grounds and in the style of architecture in harmony with the university buildings.

"Our denomination is steadily growing in California, and in accordance with the rapidity of growth here we will be able to progress with our work.

"As a religious body the Disciples number nearly a million in the United States. According to the last census we are credited with having over 900,000. Their rate of increase during the last ten years has been 82 per cent or larger than any other religious body in the United States. In California, however, we have not more than 20,000 adherents.

"Berkeley is an ideal site for such an institution as ours is to be, because of its being the site of the State University, and because of its proximity to the large churches and libraries and lecture halls of San Francisco. We have come to stay and to me the prospects of success are flattering in the extreme."

Dr. Jefferson is a graduate of the Indiana State University, having taken the highest honors of his class. He finished his course in 1871 with the degree A. B. and subsequently received the degrees A. M. and LL. D. from Bethany College, West Virginia. He spent nearly twenty years in the pastorate of the Christian Church. During the last three years he has been Professor of Biblical Literature and Doctrine in Bethany College, the oldest school of the Disciples, which was founded by Alexander Campbell. He gave up his position in Bethany College to assume presidency of the Pacific Coast Institution.

Professor Waterman is in from Laundry Farm to attend the meeting of the Board of Education this evening.

Miss Nellie O'Toole, daughter of Dr. M. C. O'Toole, has decided to enter a French convent. The young lady reached France last Thursday. She has received a thorough education in the best Catholic colleges of California and has many friends in Berkeley.

While playing on the beach Saturday afternoon a daughter of John M. Foy cut her foot with a piece of broken glass. She was carried to Dr. Eastman's, who dressed the wound, which was not a very serious one.

A DARING THIEF.

A Confidence Man.

About 11 o'clock on Saturday forenoon a man about 5 feet 10 inches high, wearing a gray suit of clothes and a soft hat and a light mustache, about 35 to 40 years of age, called in at Waterbury's stable and asked for a horse and buggy. He represented that he was going out collecting for H. H. Scott & Son & Co., the coal dealers. He stated that he would be back about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Waterbury has been looking for him with both eyes and "wondering if ever he will return" ever since. The man, horse and buggy have failed to materialize in Berkeley as yet.

On enquiring at Mr. Scott's office it was found that no one had been authorized to get a horse and buggy for him.

Dispatches have been sent all about the country notifying the various law officers and asking assistance to catch the runaway.

Mrs. Dr. Anthony has returned from a trip to Vallejo.

Mrs. McIntosh of Golden Gate has returned from her camping trip at Niles.

Mr. and Mrs. Lombard and Mr. and Mrs. Hanson of Golden Gate left for the country on Saturday.

J. R. Little, who has been spending several days at his ranch at Mount Oliver, returned last evening.

W. T. Gilligan and family returned last evening from a few weeks' outing at Glen Ellen.

The June and July weddings have been very numerous in Berkeley this year. Can it be because it is leap year?

Mr. Sidney Rhorer has been engaged to sing in the opera Satanella to be given at the Macdonough theatre. He will assume the part of the "Devil."

The West Berkeley Athletic Club will meet this evening for the transaction of important business and a full attendance of the members is requested.

The reports that Justice Field of the United States Supreme Court was losing his mind has been denied by his physician and his friends. The Judge's health is said to be better now than it has been for several months.

The members of the Berkeley Glee Club were received with enthusiasm at the ratification meeting on Saturday evening last, and we doubt whether there is a better club anywhere in the State.

The board of trustees of the Alameda County Farm met at its rooms in the Town Hall. There is considerable business to transact besides receiving the report of Health Officer Rowell and Sanitary Inspector Thompson in reference to the Kellogg school.

Mrs. Dr. Wood of South Berkeley is circulating a petition asking her husband to allow her to live in his house, but she does not appear to get many signers, and it is very doubtful whether her husband would pay any attention to it if she did as he is divorced from her.

Warning.

Some person has of late been throwing rocks upon my house and injuring the same. Last night it was repeated. I now desire to give warning that the next time that anything of the kind occurs I will give the perpetrators a very warm reception.

REPUBLICAN RALLY

Hundreds of Loyal Republicans

LISTEN TO THE VERY ABLE ADDRESSES

Made at Shattuck Hall on Saturday Evening last—The Campaign is now Opened.

Ratification Meeting.

Shortly after dark on Saturday evening last the cannon in front of Shattuck Hall began to belch and kept at it until after 8 o'clock. Skyrockets in profusion were sent up into the air.

The streets were filled with people as early as 7 o'clock and long before 8 o'clock every seat in Shattuck Hall was occupied and standing room was at a premium.

At a little after 8 o'clock the band marched into the hall and opened the meeting by playing a patriotic air. President Lair Hill then made a few remarks after which he introduced Dr. Derrick of Oakland as the first speaker of the evening.

The doctor was received with applause as he stepped forward upon the stage and after paying a compliment to beautiful Berkeley and its people, at once plunged into his subject. He ignored the Populist party entirely and paid his respects to the Democratic party, a party whose promises he said could not be trusted. Three years ago the Democratic party inserted a bimetallic plank in its platform.

He asked how the Democratic party kept that promise. The very first thing that it did was to call one extra session of Congress and repeal the Sherman act which provided for the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver per month.

The Democratic President then issued bonds which were sold to English capitalists in order to keep up the gold reserve in the United States Treasury. The Democrats would do the same thing again if they are elected.

The speech of Dr. Derrick was to the point and was listened to attentively by the large audience present and at its conclusion the speaker was warmly applauded.

The Berkeley Glee Club was then introduced and rendered for their first song "Hard Times Come Again No more." They had to respond twice more before the audience would allow them to retire.

The Glee Club was composed of Berkeley young men, all of whom have splendid voices which harmonize well with each other. They will be heard very often during the campaign and have started in at once as favorites.

Hon. Fred A. Stratton was then introduced by the president.

He stated that he felt at home in Berkeley for he had years ago roamed over the ground where Berkeley now stands when there was not a house in sight and no University buildings [illegible] State University and he loved Berkeley and its University.

He stated that he was a candidate for State Senator and if he should be sent to Sacramento he would endeavor to secure the necessary appropriations for the University in order that more fine buildings for the accommodation of students who are now clamoring for admission may be erected.

He would legislate so that the hydraulic mining in this State could be resumed and the earth be made to give up its golden treasure.

He favored a gold standard until such time as the other nations would join the United States in silver coinage. He said that what would bring happiness and prosperity to this country was Protective Tariff. He had recently visited Europe and he found California canned goods and fruits on sale. He saw California wheat pouring into these foreign countries. These and and other things are goods that the foreign countries are compelled to purchase from us.

The goods that we buy in England, France and Germany we can make at home and make them just as good, and if we had a protective tariff they would be manufactured here and thousands of Americans would be given employment. He said that when McKinley was a member of Congress he introduced a bill to stop the influx of foreign immigration and, if he were elected President he would in his first message to Congress ask that body to pass a law stopping foreign immigration and thereby give protection to our own working people. He thought that the people would find it just as hard to be crucified on a silver as a gold cross.

At the conclusion of his speech the band played another patriotic air and Miss Susan B. Anthony, the Veteran Woman Suffragist, who made a speech in reference to the subject nearer and dearer to her heart and complimented the Republican party upon their good judgment and their spirit of fair play and justice in placing the Woman's Suffrage plank in their State platform.

At the conclusion of her remarks the Glee Club again pleased the audience with a couple of songs, after which the chairman called Hon. Reese Clark of Yolo county, who was in the audience to the platform.

Mr. Clark made a few brief remarks upon national affairs, and the audience was dismissed.

The meeting was a most successful one and showed plainly that Berkeley can be depended upon to give a rousing majority for McKinley and protection. It also showed that the ladies and gentlemen of Berkeley are fully alive to the importance of the coming election and that their patriotism will bring them out to all the Republican meetings that may be held during the campaign.

GETTING EXCITING.

The Candidates for Highland Springs are Just Rushing in their Votes.

Nip and Tuck.

It is nip and tuck between the contestants in the telephone and telegraph girls' contest as to who shall head the list and who shall be the fortunate ones to go to the Springs and enjoy a two weeks' outing. Miss Brackett, in the telephone contest, has maintained the lead ever since the start, but Miss Leuders is pressing her very closely. Miss Cain is also making some great strides and may soon be up to the leaders. Miss Keenan of the Telegraph girls still maintains her lead but Miss Gibney is pressing her pretty hard. There are only about ten days more in which to get votes so the different candidates had better be alive and see that their chances do not get smaller.

The vote today is as follows:

Leila C. Brackett, Berkeley	4685

FOR BATH BEACH

Cottages to be Erected on the Beach

MORE DRESSING ROOMS TO BE ADDED AT ONCE

The Beach now Becoming a very Popular and Pleasant Resort.

Improvements at Bath Beach.

Although not a very large amount of money has been spent as yet in new buildings at Bath Beach yet a commencement has been made which will end ere many years in something which will be surprising to our towns people who have not as yet fully awakened up to the fact that Berkeley will have a seaside resort which will attract thousands of people every summer to enjoy the romps upon the fine sandy beach, and a dip in the briny waters as it leaves the shores of the great University town of the Pacific Coast.

The nucleus is here and around it will very soon be built private cottages for use during the summer months after the manner of doing the same thing along the shores from Florida to the State of Maine. Some people may laugh at this idea but they are informed that applications have already been made for sufficient land to erect small cottages near the beach which can be used for summer camping by the waves.

It is how proposed to lay off lots on either side of the grounds that are intended for public use so that anybody who so desires can erect such a building as they may see fit for private use. There will always be a responsible and competent person in charge of the public bath house, who will also look after the private establishments when not occupied.

When these kind of buildings once get underway it will not take long for this acreage to be fully dotted with handsome small buildings.

This is one of the new improvements fast getting into shape on Bath Beach, but there is another one in view which will soon assume large proportions.

On the land adjacent to the present site of the public bath house is an almost circular bayou of thirty or forty feet in width, but which can very easily be made double that width if so desired, which can at no very great cost be converted into a beautiful lake for boating purposes. Nature has done three quarters of the work. The water supply is from the ocean and flows in and out with the tide and never gets stagnant. It can be made a beautiful place for boating exercise as well as pleasure.

It is sufficiently in from the main beach to have protection from the heavy westerly winds and yet near enough to get the sea breeze as it comes directly through the Golden Gate, softened and toned down as it passes across the bay to the Berkeley shore. Fresh water can be obtained in large qualities about one-half mile away sufficient for the daily supply of 2000 inhabitants if as much should be needed. Moneyed men have of late been taking note of all these matters to which attention is now called and and will soon furnish the means to go ahead so as to make by judicious expenditure the Bath Beach and its surroundings one of the prettiest and handiest pleasure resorts in California.

Mind you this is not going to be all by itself. Better transportation facilities will have to be afforded and as the place is patronized a dozen kinds of businesses will have to be inaugurated for the accomodation of the increasing number of people who will be with us for all time to say nothing of those who come on holidays and special occasions.

The Bandit Prince

On the evening of July 24th the above named piece will be given at Shattuck Hall by the Wilkie-Rhorer Opera Company who have just returned from a touring trip throughout the State. The opera is full of brilliant music and humorous situations. The opera was written by our fellow townsman, Sid. Rhorer, and it should be greeted by a large and fashionable audience.

ABOUT DREAMS.

Dr. Case Says That They Should Not be Told or Described.

Dr. Case Talks of Dreams.

The Rev. Dr. W. W. Case of San Francisco, preached yesterday morning in Trinity Methodist Church, and paid his respects to seers of visions and relaters of dreams.

"I do not believe in the telling of visions and dreams, no matter how momentous they may seem to the seer or dreamer," said Dr. Case. "I have had visions myself, many people have them, but they are not to be talked about. They are private, and descriptions of them are out of place at public prayer meetings.

"If Christians would follow the example of St. Paul in the matter they would not be in danger of going wrong. St. Paul had a vision, but he kept it to himself for fourteen years. When this is done no mistakes in interpretation are likely to be made."

On the Beach.

Saturday was a gala day at Bath Beach, West Berkeley. An invitation had been extended to all of the Sabbath school children of Berkeley to attend, and advantage was taken of it. The large wagon drawn by two horses which connects with the half-hourly trips of the horse cars from East Berkeley, and conveys passengers who are transferred to the bath houses, was taxed to its utmost to do the work required of it. The proprietors had no idea that the travel would be so large, or additional accommodations would have been provided.

The children well chaperoned enjoyed themselves playing upon the sand, which is plentiful and affords just what the youngsters like to riot in. They also had the opportunity to paddle in the waters which come fully in, in the afternoon. Although a strong breeze was blowing late in the day, yet the temperature of the water was 70 degrees.

The placing of the fare at five cents for the round trip for children was a great inducement. If this was made the regular fare, all the time, the business would increase.

Many families have several children and the difference in the half fare rates to the bathing grounds would amount up to more than the most of people could afford if the children should go into the sea baths as often as once a week.

There is nothing equally as good as salt water bathing taken in conjunction with the saline air, which pervades the atmosphere on the beache, for health.

It was a bright day for the future of Berkeley, when the salt water baths were established.

Nebraska For Bryan.

St. Louis, July 20.—The Nebraska delegation, headed by Senator Allen, has prepared the following statement:

"The Nebraska delegation is authority for Bryan. They know him well. His life has been a fulfillment rather than a mere promise. We know of his high character and his great fitness for his great office of President. He is our neighbor, and we have not been deceived in him.

"If elected he will be the greatest man that has occupied the White House since the days of Lincoln, and in his broad and genuine sympathy for the masses he more nearly resembles Lincoln than any public man we can recall.

"The nomination of a third ticket would be the exact equivalent of a genuine indorsement for McKinley, the single gold standard, the abominable high tariff tax, a continued gold bond issue and a perpetual national debt.

"If elected President, Mr. Bryan will know no Democrat, no Populist, no Republican. There will be no step-children in his political family. All who have been with great reforms foresee that the fight will be on an equal footing. He will be the people's President. Nebraska is for Bryan."

DON'T WANT SILVER.

There are quite a number of Socialists in Berkeley and the most of them are pronounced silver men who will have to sever their connection with the Socialist Party or swallow the following resolution, which was adopted at the Socialist convention yesterday:

Resolved, That we disapprove of the free coinage of silver at a rate of 16 to 1 by the United States as being class legislation for the debtor class, detrimental to the interests of the wage earners, tending to further despoil the producers by cheapening their labor and reducing their purchasing power.

CHANGED HIS MIND

A gentleman who lives near Modesto is the owner of 1600 acres of government land upon which he has raised an immense crop of wheat this year. He has for many years been an ardent prohibitionist, and has always voted for the nominee of that party. When Bryan was nominated at Chicago he announced that he would vote the Democratic ticket as he favored free silver.

His neighbors were like himself they wanted the free and unlimited coinage of silver claiming that they could then sell their wheat to better advantage.

Last week a nephew of this gentleman went to visit him and as the nephew is an ardent McKinley man there were frequent discussions between uncle and nephew in reference to the Republican and Democratic parties.

The farmer while he believed in free silver was also desirous of having protection, but he thought that he could let protection take care of itself while he voted for free silver. When his nephew asked him why he desired to vote for free silver he informed him that he felt that way because it would put lots of money in circulation. The young man then informed him that he would have to sell his wheat for dollars that were only worth 50 cents and gave him the following illustration which quickly caused him to announce his allegiance to Major McKinley.

It seems that shortly after the war the farmer purchased his present 1,600 acres from the government at the rate of $1.25 per acre. At that time greenbacks were worth only 50 cents on the dollar so Mr. Farmer took gold and purchased $2000 worth of greenbacks for $1000. He then took his greenbacks and paid the government with them for his land, making a clear saving of $1000. His nephew called his attention to this and told him that when he sold his wheat crop this year and got his gold pieces for it he had better take it to Mexico and buy Mexican coin for 60 cents on the dollar and bring it back here and he would then have double the amount of money.

The farmer at once said, but that money will only be worth 60 cents here. True said the nephew, and that will be just the value of an American silver dollar if a bill is passed for the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Mr. Farmer saw the point at once and is now a supporter of McKinley and he has also convinced several of his neighbors who were for free silver that they would be voting against their own interests if they voted for a free silver president, and he has succeeded in converting them.

This will be a campaign of education and before the third day of November rolls around, thousands of people who now honestly think that the free coinage of silver means the restoration of good times, will be convinced that they are wrong and that the free coinage of silver can never be of benefit to this country until the other nations adopt silver with the United States.

The ratification meeting at Shattuck Hall on Saturday evening last was a grand success and the applause that was given every time that McKinley's name was mentioned shows that Berkeley will give the Republican candidate a rousing majority. Dr. Derrick made a stirring speech in the issues of the day. He was followed by Fred Stratton who was something of a disappointment as he did not make one of his usual speeches but seemed to be nervous and flustered.

It now looks as though there would be a red hot convention in St. Louis this week. The friends of Bryan will work night and day for the endorsement of Bryan, while the Middle of the Road Populists will strive for an independent ticket. The Southern States are solid for a ticket of their own, and threaten to bolt the Convention if Bryan is endorsed.

John Buckingham, editor and proprietor of the Mendicino Dispatch and Democrat is dead. He was a forcible writer and a hard hitter, and was beloved by all the newspaper men in the State. It will be hard to fill his place and besides being a good newspaper man, Ukiah has lost one of its best citizens.

BERKELEY has got a candidate for a State office, Mr. James Andrew having been nominated for Lieutenant Governor by the Socialists in San Francisco yesterday.

THE MOST DANGEROUS WOMAN

To Society Is She Who Is Married and Indifferent to Domestic Ties.

"It is unfortunate that we have in this life of ours, which seems so full to some of us, so many women who can find nothing for their hands to do," writes Edward W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal, discussing "Women and Card Parties." "I do not mean by this those whom we call the wealthy and the leisure classes. The greatest dangers to our womanhood do not arise from these classes. The woman most dangerous to modern society is she who is married and yet is indifferent to domestic ties, who lives in boarding house or hotel, and who is constantly on the lookout for something to occupy her attention. And a woman in this condition generally finds the very thing she shouldn't. Instead of filling up her life with something worthy of her womanhood, she drags it out through a succession of such enjoyments as these progressive card parties.

"As she cannot play alone she seeks company, and, unfortunately, it is never difficult for a woman of this sort to find companions of her own kind. She is one of the types of women who have made these card parties what they are today among women. The well bred woman, the woman of intelligence who can see their relative fitness of things; the woman who believes that God gave her something to do in this world; the woman with nice perceptions; the woman who is wholesome in every sense; the woman whom it is good for another woman to know, who says something of value when she speaks, who lifts herself mentally and spiritually above others, whom mothers like their daughters to know and their sons to talk with—believe me, my friend, when I say all this, and I say it in kindness—such women do not play cards during afternoon daytime; they leave that to others. They find any other way to pass the time—something worthier of them, something better, more elevating, more enlightening and better fitted to qualify them for their positions in their homes and their duties toward their husbands and children."

The home secretary, the secretary for war and the secretary for India receive each a salary of $25,000 per year.

IT IS UNWISE

to pay more for your goods than you have to pay. The things we offer each week in this paper are to let you get an idea of how much too much you are paying for goods. To let you know where you can do better than you are now doing. To help you get up a healthy discontent with credit prices.

There's no enjoyment in paying big prices for supplies, but some people hold on fast as though it was a fine thing to do.

You get lots of good goods for a little good money (silver or gold) of us, and you can get your money back if our goods are not right. They, too, prices that suit you.

THE GAZETTE

IN POSSESSION.

"Very extraordinary!" agreed Ethel. "I never heard of such a thing in my life!"

"I should hope not!" returned Mrs. Fielding. "What would your poor, dear father have said if, during his lifetime, a young man had come to propose for your hand, and, on being refused by you, had expressed his intention of staying in the house until you accepted him? Even not even send in novels" (with a fine touch of scorn) "of such a preposterous notion. Did he—did—did he seem firm about it, my dear?"

"Frightfully," Ethel assured her—"frightfully firm, and you should just see what a chin he has. It would make three of mine."

"What did you say?" asked Mrs. Fielding.

"What could I say? I've already told you everything. I met him, as you know, at the Marchant-Mainwarings, and after our first introduction saw him almost every day during the following month. The night before I came home he proposed to me, and I—well, you know what I said. He then declared his intention of asking me again every six months and didn't seem to care in the least when I assured him that my answer would be just the same, however many times he asked me. Well, it is exactly six months today since the—the first time I told him that I couldn't think of marrying him."

"And he expressed his intention of staying here—in this house—till you said, 'Yes?'" put in Mrs. Fielding.

Ethel nodded.

"Then," was Mrs. Fielding's decision, "we must send for the police."

"Oh, no—no—no—no!" ejaculated Ethel springing up. "Please don't do that. He's sure to go. He—he's very gentlemanly, mother, and I'm sure he'll behave himself if he does stop. Besides if he fought the policemen—and I'm sure he would fight—there'd be such a scandal!"

Yes, Mrs. Fielding agreed that the affair would give Market Norbury a month's food for tittle tattle if the strong arm of the law were to intervene.

"I will see the young person myself!" exclaimed the elder lady majestically.

"Don't be harsh, mother," said Ethel blushing a little, "because, after all, you know he's—"

"Head over heels in love with you? Of course," rejoined Mrs. Fielding. "Of course he is. If he weren't, I should suspect him of having evil designs on the plate. Leave him to me, Ethel!"

So saying, Mrs. Fielding swept magnificently into the drawing room.

But severe as was her tone and stern her mien, Dick Waterbury declined to budge. He apologized for the gross rudeness of his decision, but nevertheless refused to spike his guns and retire. During the altercation Mrs. Fielding discovered that he was a young gentleman of 25, with an ample income, and a small country seat that stood sadly in need of some one to look after it.

Twenty minutes later Mrs. Fielding returned to her daughter.

"My reasoning had no effect on him whatever," she informed Ethel; "none whatever. I suppose he must remain. He may be in a more sensible frame of mind in the morning. Don't let the servants know anything about the real state of things, but pretend that we have invited him to stay here and say his luggage will arrive in due course."

The result was: (1) That Mr. Richard Waterbury gained his point and staid at Pleasant View. (2) That only his fixed determination to win Ethel Fielding would have led him to take such a desperate step. (3) That Ethel by no means deceived the maternal judgment when she expressed herself indignantly about Dick and his resolution. (She let slip his name—Dick—several times unthinkingly.) (4) That it was the general opinion in the kitchen that the gentleman who had come so suddenly—without any luggage—was a "man in possession." (5) That he seemed to the kitchen a very well dressed man in possession. (6) That the gentleman immediately sat down and wrote a long letter, which was given to the housemaid to post. (7) That he wired to another address for some clothes. (8) That the letter was addressed to Mr. John Blunt, Friar's Court, Temple, London. (9) That, in the opinion of the kitchen, "Friar's Court" sounded like a low place for any gentleman's friends to live in.

Dick Waterbury had been with the Fieldings a week and still showed no signs of departing from his resolution. He had soon made himself at home; he had broken the ice over the dinner table during the first night of his stay. Mrs. Fielding and her daughter had opened the ball by treating him with frigid politeness; but Dick had pretended not to notice their manner, and rattled on so gayly that he effectually dispersed the cold barrier which the ladies had attempted to place between themselves and their self invited guest.

After dinner he regaled them with comic songs, anecdotes and news of the day which had failed to penetrate to the fastnesses of Market Norbury. So very agreeable did he make himself, indeed, that by bedtime he had quite won Mrs. Fielding over to his side. Ethel kept very close to her mother all the evening, he noticed, and would neither play nor sing, although she could do both very nicely. On the following day his clothes arrived, and on the third day a letter, addressed to him in a bold, masculine hand. He appeared to peruse this letter with much interest, and the one he wrote in reply he delivered to the housemaid with special instructions that it was to be posted before 6 p. m., at which hour the Market Norbury mail cart was dispatched. The housemaid told the cook that for a man in possession the newcomer wrote a very elegant hand. This letter, too, was addressed to that low place, Friar's Court, Temple.

So, by the time Dick had been located at Pleasant View seven days he was quite on friendly—nay, intimate—terms with his hostess and her daughter. Every morning when he met the latter at the breakfast table, seizing an opportunity of course when Mrs. Fielding was not present, he had asked, "Well?" and Ethel had shaken her head very determinedly and made the most of the exceedingly dimpled chin, which only represented one-third of Mr. Waterbury's. During the whole of that week Dick had never once been out. The kitchen commented severely on this point. It savored more of the "man in possession" than anything else he had done.

"He's been sent, and he's got to stop," was cook's verdict. "And mistress is making the best of a bad job by treating him as a gentleman guest. I've always understood that the poor master left her comf'able off, and I can't understand how she's lost her money. I suppose it's a mine or something. Thank goodness! I've got all my little savings wrapped up in a stocking and locked in my box!"

Seven days had gone—the seventh night had come, and still Ethel remained obdurate. But she paid, her mother noticed, considerable attention to her toilet and wore her prettiest dresses.

* * * * * * *

What was that?

Mrs. Fielding sat up, bathed in cold perspiration.

What was—there it was again—scratching on the window? She listened—her heart beating a wild tattoo against her ribs. Yes—there again—somebody was trying to break in!

Only a sliding door separated Mrs. Fielding's room from her daughter's. Her teeth chattering in time with the wild throbbing of her pulses, Mrs. Fielding crept out of bed and, the sliding door being partly open, into her daughter's room. Ethel was slumbering peacefully, but a touch awoke her. There was a hurried explanation in whispers from Mrs. Fielding, and then the two women, clutching each other for comfort, stole into the outer bedroom and once more listened. The scratching had ceased, and only a shuffling sound could be heard. Then there were footsteps on the gravel walk, and then the scullery window (which was immediately beneath) was shot up with a force that denoted a careless haste on the part of the midnight intruder.

"A burglar!" exclaimed Ethel, pale to the lips, for she was only 19 and an ordinary girl with ordinary nerves.

Unconsciously her lips formed the word "Dick!"

"I'll wake Mr. Waterbury," said Mrs. Fielding. She tripped swiftly out of the room, down the passage, and rapped at her guest's door.

In almost less time than it takes to relate it Dick found himself standing at his door, in dressing gown and trousers, trying to instill some calmness into the troubled breasts of Mrs. Fielding, her daughter, the cook and the housemaid—for Mrs. Fielding had aroused the servants, there being comfort in numbers, even scared ones.

"Stop here," said Dick. "I'll go down. If she doesn't use arms I can manage him!"

So saying, he moved quietly down stairs, and the women, afraid to be left by themselves, followed him at a respectful distance. A few moments and the darkness had swallowed up Dick's form. An anxious interval followed, during which nothing could be heard.

Suddenly there were a crash of crockery and a savage exclamation; then another crash; then a whole series of crashes. The cook and housemaid shrieked with fright. Mrs. Fielding grasped the banisters and trembled. Ethel trembled, too, for Dick—yes, for Dick. She loved him; she knew it now. His life was in peril.

The house was filled with sounds of the struggle. A desperate fight was going on in the passage leading to the kitchen. The women could dimly discern the forms of the two men who, breathing, in short, quick gasps, were struggling furiously for the mastery. Backward and forward they swayed, with clinched teeth and straining muscles. Still the women dared not move. The couple had fought their way down to the extreme end of the passage and were close to the scullery door. Suddenly a pistol shot rang out, there was a cry, a splintering of wood and a crash of glass, and the two vanished.

A few seconds later Dick returned, his dressing gown half torn off his back.

"He got away," he exclaimed. "But he didn't take anything. I'll get some things on and be off to the police station."

The women gazed at their hero with fond, admiring eyes. Once again they breathed freely. Slowly they moved up stairs—all but Ethel.

"Are you hurt?" she asked him, with infinite tenderness in her voice.

"Only a bruise or two," he replied. "I'll soon set the police on his track. But first—"

He took her hand in his.

"I said I would not leave the house," he began.

Ethel looked swiftly up the stairs to make sure they two were unobserved. Then she bent forward, quickly breathed "Yes" in his ear and fled to her room.

The police never caught the burglar, who got back to Friar's Court quite safely, after catching the earliest train from a roadside station six miles from Market Norbury.

Ethel quite meant her "Yes," and in due time was married to the "man in possession," much to the cook and housemaid's wonderment.

"It was a good idea of Dick's!" was all he said.—Tit-Bits.

Is a Biographer a Detective?

If I discovered, per impossible, that Jeane d'Arc ever did a wrong thing, my duty to the stock of human pleasure would outweigh my duty to the truth. "Never mind the truth" would be my motto. "Perhaps there is some mistake somewhere." Or suppose, also per impossible, that one discovered a check forged by Burns. One would destroy it and say nothing about it. A biographer is not a detective; he is not preparing at the day of judgment. These ideas will be considered immoral. Many French authors try (quite in vain) to prove that Molière married the daughter of his mistress. This kind of spirit seems to be not uncommon at present among biographers, a class which Mr. Carlyle thought used to be so "mealy mouthed."

Poor Highland Mary is harried in her modest resting place, "washed by the western wave." One thing we do know very well about her—namely, that Burns wanted nothing to be known. She had lived and he had loved her. There he manifestly desired that information should cease, and Lockhart has actually been blamed for leaving it there. Of all the duties of a biographer one can regard none more stringent than respect to the secrets of his subject. If he can, he should burn and obliterate; if he cannot, he should forget. Yet if a letter of Burns to Highland Mary, clearing up all that he desired to remain concealed (if anything is left) could be found, the devotees of Burns, as a rule, would make haste to publish the epistle. Of all cant "the public has a right to know" is the most odious. The public has not a right to know.—Andrew Lang in Longman's Magazine.

"This here new light of Edison's would be a good thing to hev in hotels, I'm thinking," remarked Mr. Hayseed as he blew out the gas. "I wonder if I shall live to see it?"—Chicago Dispatch.

Men of humor are in some degree men of genius. Wits are rarely so, although a man of genius may, among other gifts, possess wit—as Shakespeare.—Coleridge.

Falsehood is susceptible of an infinity of combinations, but truth has only one mode or being.—Rousseau.

Certificates of Death.

Who can tell how many persons are buried alive every year? How many cases of suspended animation are there on record, and how many horrors that are never known save by accident, when once in a while some grave is opened and discoveries are made that shock whole communities. There is not, up to date, any certain test for death, although there have been experiments and trials innumerable. After exhausting all of the resources of science, medical experts have arrived at the conclusion that the only certain test of death is the condition of the body. Until there are unmistakable signs of decay, death is by no means a foregone conclusion. The sense of smell is the very best possible guide in such matters. Even the eyes are not to be trusted, as there are cases on record where bodies have become almost black and yet life was not extinct.

In one instance burial was delayed by unavoidable circumstances until the friends became alarmed by the color which they mistook for mortification, and, fearing some outbreak of disease, they sent for disinfectants and sanitary experts. Before they arrived, however, there was a marked change in the appearance of the body. From a purplish hue like a bad bruise it gradually became lighter and assumed a lifelike color, and within a few hours there were evidences of returning animation. Although several physicians had been in attendance and the person was pronounced dead, the result proved the unreliability of their decision.—New York Ledger.

Threaten To Bolt

St. Louis, July 20.—The belief continues generally prevalent that a bolt is among the strong probabilities of the Populist convention, whatever course may be decided upon by the majority.

Delegates are constantly arriving, and the larger the crowd becomes the more evident is the intensity of the feeling over the one question at issue.

This question is whether to indorse Bryan and Sewall or nominate a separate ticket.

In a general way the contest is between the North and South. The Northern men, as a class, contend that in the indorsement of Bryan lies the only hope of making the influence of the party felt or of achieving practical results, while the Southern men, remembering their many contests, with the Democrats of their section, maintain that such a course is utterly suicidal.

Both classes are equally in earnest, and both declare that there is but one course open.

They are perfecting a thorough organization and mean to make a strenuous effort to secure the indorsement of the Democratic nominee.

They do not publicly admit that there is any possibility that they will not be able to control the convention, but privately many say that if a separate ticket is nominated they will walk out of the convention and appeal to the people to rally to the support of Bryan and Sewall. The other crowd is more reticent but the feeling is none the less intense.

This is the season when a supply of sour milk, sour cream or buttermilk quickly accumulates in thousands of households. These ingredients may be utilized in a variety of delicious dishes. Perhaps the most popular evolution from sour milk are the sour milk pan-cakes. These should not be mixed until ready to bake. Allow to three cups medium sour milk two teaspoonsful soda and a little salt; beat until the mixture stops foaming, then stir in flour to make consistency required. Have the griddle hot and clean; grease lightly with a bit of suet tied in a thin cloth; drop the batter from a tablespoon in uniform round cakes, bake a golden brown, and pile symmetrically. Serve while very hot with maple syrup. These will be found to be much more light and delicate than where eggs are used.

FACING A GRIZZLY.

HOW A BOY KILLED AN ANGRY BEAR WITH A BLOW OF AN AX.

His Brave Act Saved the Life of One of His Companions—The Geology Class Found Something In the Rockies It Wasn't Looking For.

It was in September—and the Colorado sun had done its duty and made Phil as brown of face and stout of limb as any of us—that the geology class, consisting of the professor and ten pupils, made an excursion into the range with the object of taking a practical lesson among the limestone beds at the back of Lincoln park.

Away we went—feeling very hilarious at the idea of making an independent expedition, even with Blinkers, &c., a general scrambling over rocks and fallen trees, chasing squirrels and chipmunks, throwing stones at birds and rabbits, and behaving generally just like what we were—a parcel of school boys.

Presently we emerged from the trees and came out upon another little open parklike stretch of ground. Half way across it our attention was suddenly attracted by a stir among some high grass, and out jumped a little, dark colored, short legged animal, which looked like a woolly pig—if there be any such thing in nature.

Away it scuttled, and away we all went, with a shout, in pursuit.

Phil happened to be some distance behind at the moment, being busily engaged in digging a tarantula's nest out of the ground with his knife; but as soon as he saw what we were doing he came racing after us, shouting: "Look out! Look out! It's a'—

We did not hear what we were making so much noise ourselves.

But the little animal, whatever it was, was too quick for us and disappeared into some willows while we were still 20 yards behind. The next moment the willows waved and bent and out bounced a great she bear—a grizzly!

With a yell of dismay we all turned and, scattering like a flock of sparrows when a cat jumps into the midst of them, fled for the nearest trees. Blinkers, quite forgetting that he was the general of the little expeditionary force, made such use of his long legs that he was safely up a tree before any of the rest of us had reached one.

As for me, I never reached one at all. In turning to run I tripped over the ax, and though I was up again in an instant the check made me the last of the fugitives.

The chase was very soon over. In six jumps, as it seemed, the great beast caught me, and, with one blow of her paw on the middle of my back, sent me, face downward, to the ground, with every atom of breath driven out of my body.

This last circumstance was a good thing for me; I could not have moved a muscle if I had wished to. Consequently the bear supposed that I was dead, and instead of tearing me up into small pieces, as I expected, she began sniffing me all over and turning me about with her claws.

Suddenly, however, she ceased and began to growl, and I heard Blinkers up in his tree call out, "Go back! You can't do any good. You'll only get yourself killed too." From which I concluded that Blinkers and the bear had one thought in common; they both supposed me to be dead.

I was beginning to recover my breath a little by this time, and in my anxiety to see what was going forward I made a slight movement with one arm, and in an instant the bear had that arm between her teeth. It hurt me so horribly that I fainted, and all that happened afterward I gathered from the other boys.

Phil, when he saw me knocked down, instead of climbing up a tree like the rest, ran back to where I had dropped the ax, and, picking it up, advanced to my rescue.

It was a mad thing to do, there is no doubt about that; but Phil did it—and without a thought of his own danger. It was in vain that Blinkers called to him to go back; he did not seem to hear, but kept coming on slowly, with his eyes fixed on the bear, and the ax held in readiness to strike.

The bear dropped my arm, and advanced a step, standing across my body, growling and turning up her lips until all her great white teeth were exposed; but still Phil came on. At six feet distance he stopped. The bear took a step forward, and then another, and then, with all the strength of his body doubled by the intense excitement of the moment, Phil struck at her with such force and precision that he split her skull clean in two.

But, even in dying, the bear succeeded in doing some mischief.

With a last convulsive effort she struck out, and, with her great claws, tore away the front of Phil's coat, vest and shirt, and made three deep cuts all across his chest from the left shoulder diagonally downward. Another inch and Phil must certainly have been killed. As it was, he stood for a moment swaying to and fro, and then fell forward upon the dead body of the bear.—"Grizzly Phil," by Sidford F. Hamp, in St. Nicholas.

THE GLOBE OF MARS.

What We Know to an Absolute Certainty About the Planet.

We know that the years of Mars, almost twice as long as ours, are composed of 686 days, 23 hours, 30 minutes and 41 seconds, and surely nothing need be more precise. We know also that the duration of day and night, or, to speak more exactly, that of the diurnal rotation, is 24 hours, 37 minutes, 22 seconds and 65 hundredths of a second. We know further that, since the inclination of its axis of rotation is 24 degrees 52 minutes, the seasons there are sensibly of the same intensity as upon our planet. Besides, with our own eyes we see the polar snows melt during the summer and reappear in the winter.

Furthermore, we know very exactly the geography of this neighboring globe, and in this respect there is hardly any more mystery for us than in its calendar. We have observations and detailed drawings of its continents, its seas, its streams, its islands, its capes, the mouths of its great rivers and its canals—there is not, one might say, a single point upon the surface of Mars which has not been the object of perpetual study on the part of various observers.

Still further, we know also the density of this globe as well as the intensity of gravity upon its surface, and these are two dominating elements in the organization of its living residents. The whole globe of Mars, which has a diameter of about half that of the earth (528 thousandths—6,728 kilometers or 4,281 miles) weighs only 105 thousandths of our globe, or 625,584 quintillions of kilograms. The density of the materials which compose Mars is inferior to that of the substances which compose the earth in the proportion of 711 to 1,000. If we compare this density with that of water, for example, we find that the mean density of the earth is 5½ times (5.50) greater than that of water, or, in other words, our globe weighs 5½ times as much as a globe of water of the same dimensions. But Mars weighs not quite 4 times (3.91) as much as a globe of water of its dimensions. Its component substances are, then, less dense than ours.

Once more, gravity there is much less powerful than upon the earth, in the proportion of 376 to 1,000—that is to say that a mass of 1,000 pounds transported to Mars and there weighed by a spring balance would weigh only 376 pounds, and that a man weighing 160 pounds upon the earth would weigh only 60 pounds upon the surface of the neighboring globe. Here we have absolute data, demonstrated mathematically and indisputable—data with which imagination has nothing whatever to do.—North American Review.

Alumina Production.

The process brought forward by Heibling for the production of alumina from clay, so as to be absolutely free from silica, is described in Comptes Rendus as very simple. The clay is thoroughly incorporated with a mixture in equal parts of ammonia and potassium sulphates, in such proportion that three molecules of ammonium sulphate may be present to every molecule of alumina, and the mixture is made into hollow bricks, which are then heated in an oven at 270 degrees to 280 degrees C. At this temperature both gaseous ammonia and acid ammonium sulphate are given off, which immediately react with the potash salt present, acid potassium sulphate being formed, the latter, at the above temperature, combining with the alumina of the clay to form alum, and this is finally extracted from the bricks by means of water and freed from iron by recrystallization, the insoluble silica remaining behind being useful in cements. Granular alumina is prepared by spreading out the powdered alum in a thin layer on shelves arranged in a vertical tower, which is traversed by the warm, moist, ammoniacal fumes derived from the brick oven. As the result of this simple and ingenious method the alum is transformed into alumina, retaining the form of the original powder, and potassium and ammonium sul-

"Among the Healers."

It was a social occasion which had called together a number of men who are eminent in their respective professions. The person who asked question was there, and as soon as he was able engaged the attention of the man who knows everybody.

"Who is that man with the dark glasses?" was the first inquiry.

"That's Dr. Lenser."

"What is his business?"

"He's an oculist."

"And who was the gentleman who put a speaking trumpet to his ear every time anybody spoke to him?"

"That's Dr. Tympan."

"Has he a specialty?"

"Yes. He's an aurist."

"And the man who has such a phenomenally husky voice—who is he?"

"That is Dr. Eppa Glottis. He's the famous throat specialist."
